PREDICT 45 HOUR FLIGHT

Eckener Convinced That In Time Lindbergh Record
Might Be Shattered

NEW YORK, May 12.—(INS)—Her speed perceptibly increased by a 15 to 20 mile tailwind, the giant German dirigible, Hindenburg, was well out over the North Atlantic today in her return flight to Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany.

Barring unforeseen misfortune the airship should reach its home port in 45 or 46 hours, shattering the 55 hour record for an eastward crossing of the Atlantic, set seven years ago by the Graf Zeppelin.

There seemed little likelihood that the airplane mark of 33 hours, set by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in 1927, would be beaten, but Dr. Hugo Eckener is convinced that even this record may be shattered on a future flight by the Hindenburg. Just before the dirigible took off from Lakehurst, N. J., last night, he said:

"There is no reason why flight from the American coast to the coast of Europe can not be made in 24 hours some other time."

PERFECT BUCKS COUNTY
DOGWOOD ASSOCIATIONName Robert B. McKenny, of Newtown, President; Meet
In Doylestown

A. MULLER, SPEAKER

With the object in view of beautifying Bucks County with dogwood, the Bucks County Dogwood Association was organized Friday evening at Doylestown.

J. V. Hare, Trevese, served as chairman, and approximately 60 interested men and women were present.

The officers were chosen at this meeting, and are as follows:

President, Robert B. McKenny, Newtown; vice president, Mrs. Harry J. Shoemaker; secretary, Mrs. J. V. Hare, Trevese; treasurer, Isaac J. VanArtsdalen, Doylestown.

Members of a committee, who will draw up a constitution, include Isaac J. VanArtsdalen, Doylestown, John W. Prince, Newtown, and District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown.

President McKenny described the garden clubs of Bucks county as the base on which to launch the dogwood movement.

The guest speaker of the evening, Adolf Muller, president of the Montgomery County Dogwood Association, which has planted 25,000 miles of the flowering trees in one year, paid a tribute to Mrs. Shoemaker, when he explained there isn't another county in Pennsylvania engaged in advocating dogwood planting so intelligently.

"When it comes to dogwood there are no county lines," Mrs. Shoemaker wrote me in a letter," said Mr. Muller, who added and no State lines either. European countries, particularly England, are going wild over dogwoods.

The English climate will permit them to grow larger than in America. France was described as willing to sell trees by the million to Americans, but will not buy any in return—dogwoods are smuggled in through the backdoor. The United States is extremely rich in beautiful native trees and shrubs but the people have ignored them.

Declaring that Americans are being sold the idea of selling trees, Mr. Muller pointed out that thousands annually travel to see the California Redwoods, the azaleas in the Carolinas and Georgia and the botanical gardens in Rochester and Boston.

Vividly he told of a visit to the Kew Gardens in England in 1914 time.

"Many a poor person has found a way to express artistically his love of the beautiful through flowers."

Mr. Muller scorned the type of person who chides a flower lover for having a certain type of taste in group colors or of planting certain colored flowers together.

"Don't tell someone they have poor taste. You don't know how the other fellow feels. Who cares whether you want to associate this color with that, let the heart and soul talk through the colors."

The Rocky Mountains, he said, are the least explored and least sold for their beauty to the people. Such pictures as exist would startle the American people, but the British are making a survey of them now, with their plateaus that are knee-deep in flowers.

"We buy no trees. We only ask the people to plant one dogwood or more where they see fit on their property. A speech doesn't plant a tree."

Man Killed By Train
As He Crosses Tracks

While on his way home early last night, Paul Paucko, 55, living on Tripe Island, a short distance below Morrisville, was struck by an electric train on the Pennsylvania Railroad and killed instantly. His body was hurled some distance.

Paucko was employed at the farm of Dominick Kay, old Lincoln Highway, near Morrisville. It had been his custom to cross the railroad tracks along the Bristol Pike and through the sand pits to his home on the island. He was crossing the tracks about 6:30 o'clock when a Trenton-bound express struck him.

Deputy Coroner, Dr. James Lawler, of Bristol, had the body removed to the morgue of J. Allen Hooper at Morrisville. Paucko is said to have no relatives in this country.

TAX BILL HITS LITTLE FELLOW

By Representative Charles A. Plumley of Vermont

The new tax bill might be called "An Act to discourage small business, to encourage monopoly, and to prevent competition." It is aimed not at the large corporations which have accumulated an adequate surplus, but at the small one which wishes to save that it may expand; not at the man who has reached the high places, but at the man who is battling his way up.

The business of this country is done by corporations. Half a million of them filed returns for 1933 and only 109,000 reported net income. And of those more than 90,000 made less than $10,000 net income in the year.

This is a country of corporations, but it is not a country of big corporations; rather it is a country of small corporations, eager to grow, to give more work to more men and women, pay better dividends, and build new plants. And it is at the owners of these corporations, ambitious men, thrifty men, that this bill is aimed.

The truth is that this bill is not aimed at the existing surpluses at all. It will not touch the fifty millions and the hundred millions. Those companies will continue to hold their surpluses. It is the small company that wants to build up that will be the victim.

Not only is this tax bill aimed at small business, it is aimed at one of the fundamentals on which the United States has been built—the encouragement of competition for the prevention of monopoly. Old well-established organizations, well entrenched financially, will find themselves in a far better economic position as compared with less well financially entrenched existing companies, or with those new companies which seek to start in business. We do not prevent monopoly so much by passing laws as we do by permitting, even encouraging, small business to grow bigger to try out new ideas.

We debate measures to prevent price-fixing, we plan to pass a bill which will make it increasingly possible to maintain arbitrary prices. The enemy of unreasonable prices is competition, the very competition that this bill is planning to kill.

OTHER SCHOOL AFFAIRS

MORRISVILLE, May 12.—Announcement was made at a meeting of the Board of Education that the annual commencement exercises for the graduating class will be held in the high school auditorium, Tuesday night, June 23. Class Night exercises will be held Friday night, June 19, and the baccalaureate service, Sunday night, June 21. This service will be held in the high school auditorium and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. C. H. Weller, of the Methodist Church. There are 85 students in the graduating class. M. R. Reiter, the supervising principal, reported that nearly $2500 additional was granted by the W. P. A. officials to complete the laying of sidewalks and grading around the Robert Morris School, and nearly $800 was granted to complete the painting of the Robert Morris and William E. Case buildings.

Mr. Reiter also reported that the project for the painting of the brick work and painting at Manor Park School, the laying of sidewalks, plastering, and other work at the William E. Case school had been submitted to Washington and it is expected it will be approved.

In his report, Mr. Reiter stated that he believed the school board can have additional projects approved and he urged the directors to accept the opportunity of getting more W. P. A. labor. He suggested that the best immediate project was the draining and grading of the Capitol View School plot. He added that this plot is large enough to make an ideal athletic field where football, baseball and track events may be held.

William Riekey was elected janitor of the William E. Case building to fill a vacancy there.

The American Legion, of this place, is planning for the observance of Memorial Day which will be celebrated here with a parade in the morning, followed by exercises at the Morrisville Cemetery. Past Commander Harry Lair is general chairman.

The parade will form at the William E. Case School and will proceed through some of the principal streets to the cemetery where American Legion Memorial services will be held. Past Commander George W. Duke, chaplain of Morrisville Post, will conduct the services. Rev. Harold Edwint, of the Presbyterian Church, will make the opening prayer, and the Rev. C. H. Weller, of the Methodist Church, will close the exercises.

WOMAN CAPTURES
TWO BOYS IN ATTICMrs. C. Russell Ellis, Armed With Stout Stick, Holds
Youths for Officers

NO LOOT IS TAKEN

Looking through a window of her mother's home, a few feet away and noticing a window shade disarranged in her own residence, Mrs. C. Russell Ellis, North Radcliffe street, last evening went into her own house and searched it from cellar to attic where she caught two youths in the act of plundering the house. Arming herself with a stout stick Mrs. Ellis marched the lads down two flights of stairs into the kitchen where she held them prisoners until the arrival of officers for whom she telephoned.

The lads:
Edward Faras, 14, 247 Monroe street.
John Kronberg, 15, 3529 Trenton avenue.

The boys after a hearing today before Justice of Peace James Guy were held for juvenile court.

The boys had broken into the house, according to the police, but had not had time to get away with anything.

In telling Chief Jones how they had gained an entrance to the Ellis residence the boys are said to have described a rather ingenious plan.

Armed with a lead pencil they bored a hole through the wire screening on the cellar window. Then taking a piece of wire they unhooked the catch and removed the screen. The glass in the window was then broken and the boys went inside. They turned things topsy-turvy in the cellar and proceeded to the first floor. The cellar door was locked. This, however, did not deter them.

A hole was drilled through the panel of the door and the plate of the lock was removed from the cellar side. The key was pushed out onto the floor on the other side of the door. A magnet attached to a wire was shoved through the hole drilled through the panel and this picked-up the key on the other side.

Once inside the house the boys took pains to see that everything was locked behind them. They replaced the screen in the cellar window, closed the window and locked the door leading from the basement to the first floor.

When caught the boys were searching trunks and had torn off a bell transformer.

Officer Pollard and Constable Seader responded to the call and arrested the boys.

Italian Delegation Leaves

Geneva, May 12.—The League of Nations was shaken to its foundation today as the entire Italian delegation, headed by Baron Pompeo Oloisi, packed their bags to return to Rome in answer to Premier Mussolini's order to quit the League Council.

This sudden departure left the League in complete confusion as the Italians insisted they could not interpret Mussolini's order, but could only obey it.

Nobody knows whether the Italians mean to quit the League altogether or merely to absent themselves from this meeting.

"I don't know any more than you do, what the meaning of it is," Baron Aloisi told International News Service. "I can place no interpretation upon it, any communication will have to come from Rome."

It is however, supposed that Mussolini's indignation has been aroused by the League's refusal to abdicate the Abyssinian representative, Wolde Mariam.

ANTEROS

Here is celestial news that may prove important: Anteros may drop in for a call or a permanent stay.

You know Anteros. He is a tiny world whose total area probably isn't much bigger than Walla Walla. When he sped by, out in space about a million miles one evening last February, the astronomers got nervous. Except the good old moon, long known to be friendly and romantically influential, no celestial neighbor has ventured inside the million-mile limit since astronomers have been keeping records.

Well, Anteros whizzed by, doing considerably better than 25,000 miles an hour, and at that speed, the astronomers remarked, he was too close for comfort. But anyway, the miss was as good as a million miles and Anteros went by.

The astronomers of Mt. Wilson Observatory, perhaps with the notion of getting the goods on Anteros for speeding, began to take photographs of him. And what was their astonishment when they saw him begin to slow down! He was acting just like a guilty, self-conscious motorist.

By April 11, Anteros had put 100,000,000 miles between himself and the earth but he had cut his speed to 500,000 miles a day, which seems to be pretty well within the limit on celestial speedways. And the astronomers issued a warning. They said if Anteros keeps on slowing, he may come to a complete stop and in that event he will just naturally settle down on the earth.

Just why Anteros should want to visit a world so much in turmoil as is this, even the astronomers can't guess, but to have an asteroid a third of a mile in diameter head in at the rate of 20,000 miles an hour and try to park anywhere on this populous planet certainly would mess up things.

TRADING MUSCLE FOR FAT

An insurance company finds that 20 per cent of its policy holders over the age of 40 are overweight. The doctors tell us that when we reach elderly life, it is far better to be underweight than overweight. The fat man can look with envy on the beanpole figure.

The trouble with the majority of these folks, is that they lost interest in physical activity. It seemed easier to them to sit on a cushioned seat, and let the gas buggy pull them around. When you give up some of your muscle, and allow fat to grow in its place, you are likely to be trading off some years of your life.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XXXV

"We'll be back by nine in the morning," Tyler said. "I'm sure Ruth will sleep until then. I gave her a stiff dose. Poor child, she's been under a terrific strain. She needs the rest."

"But won't you be worried about her, leaving her all alone?" Johnson demanded. Tyler shook his head.

"Worried?" he asked. "What's there to be worried about now?"

As they came out onto the porch, two cars, containing Nelson, Harrigan, Cooke and the other guards came around the side of the house. The men shouted good-bys, and those on the porch waved to them as the cars went down the driveway and then headed toward the city.

Nat got out of Tyler's car. He picked him up at the porch. They called good-nights. Then they were rolling down the long driveway. Tyler spoke rapidly to Nat. Near the gate a figure appeared, swung onto the running-board. Without stopping, Nat slipped from under the steering wheel. The figure was that of Cooke, who took the wheel as Nat and Tyler silently dropped off the running-board.

The car turned in the direction taken by the others. Two men loomed up out of the darkness silently. Nelson and Harrigan. No word was spoken. Nonetheless, the four stepped off the gravel driveway, began to make their way back toward the dark cottage. Lights began to appear in the upstairs rooms of the big house.

Reaching the cottage, the four men stepped into the dark living-room. No lights were turned on. Tyler whispered to Nelson: "You and Harrigan wait here." Then he went toward the stairs, Nat following. They mounted the steps, stood in front of Ruth's door.

Tyler opened it slowly, calling out in a low voice: "Ruth, it's Nat and I."

"Father!" she said hoarsely. They went close to her quickly. Tyler leaned over and took her hand, gently.

"Yes?" he said.

She groped with her other hand until she found Nat's. Then she sighed, gratefully. "I-I played," she said in a low vibrant voice. "And then it came! Murderous determination to strike—tonight. . . To strike, Father—at me!"

Paul Gordon was deep in dreamless sleep when the telephone tinkled. He stirred, then sat up quickly. The phone—it was the house-phone—tinkled lightly again. Gordon reached for it.

"Mr. Gordon," said Tyler's voice. "Don't speak. Come at once to the cottage. Use your private stairs, and make no sound. Cross the garden in the shadows. And hurry."

Gordon heard the phone click with finality. He hung up, filled with bewilderment and alarm. Quickly he slipped into dressing gown and slippers. Furtively he let himself into the hallway, tiptoed down the steps, closed the door behind him noiselessly.

He stared across at the cottage. It was totally in darkness. A shiver of apprehension passed through him. He shook it off. The voice had obviously been that of Tyler. There was nothing for him to do but obey its urgency.

He crept toward the cottage, careful to keep in the shadows. Near the door he glanced back at the big house. It too was in total darkness. He saw the door to the cottage open slightly, and stepped forward. Inside he heard Tyler's low voice, reassuring.

He could dimly make out several dark figures. He heard Tyler give a low-voiced order: "Nelson, you and Harrigan cover the outside. Let nobody come in—but nobody go out. If there's any mix-up, you know what to do."

Astonished, Gordon heard Nelson's mumbled reply. The two men slipped into the garden. Gordon felt a firm pressure on his arm, and then heard Nat's voice. Gordon started to ask questions, but Nat silenced him, warningly. They led him up the stairs.

As they entered Ruth's room, Tyler spoke to her softly, and she answered. Tyler whispered something to Nat, who drew his automatic and stepped noiselessly to the wall, just inside the door from the hallway.

Tyler took Gordon's arm and guided him to the shadows in the far corner of the room. "Stand by," he whispered. "And don't make a sound, no matter what happens, until I give the word!" Gordon, chilled, full of foreboding, crouched against the wall, waiting for he knew not what.

Tyler went swiftly to the side of Ruth's bed nearest the window. He dropped to one knee. His left hand held one of Ruth's, his right a heavy automatic. He turned his eyes toward the lightless house and the moon-swept lawn. He saw nothing else.

Now that the moment was near, Ruth was unafraid. She tightened her hand in that of her father, and he gave it a firm squeeze. From her mind she excluded every thought. For what seemed like aeons she lay there, blankly.

Presently, almost without her realizing it, there was that sensation of light in her mind, as if that shutter had rolled back. Then she knew that the Unknown had made up its mind. Fear Ruth felt in that mind, a desperate fear, but a fear held firmly in leash by grim determination.

Very softly she whispered to her father: "Now—it is coming."

Again she felt her father's long fingers tighten. Then she was detached, waiting. She knew that a figure was letting itself out of the house, knew that it was feeling its way through the dark shadows, eyes on the cottage. She made one conscious effort to identify that figure—and felt her consciousness of it begin to recede. With an effort she cleared her mind of speculation. . . .

And again she was inside that unknown mind. With it she stood in the shadows of the garden, near the house. With it she was wary, alert. There was a long moment of indecision, a moment in which fear almost got the upper hand, and caution almost stayed its purpose.

But fear and caution were conquered at last. With the Unknown, Ruth slipped into the shadows, stood in front of the door, listening. There the figure was at the door, was opening it very slowly, without sound.

Ruth gripped her father's hand. Tyler stiffened. He heard no sound for a long moment. Then, very faintly, he made out the soft pad of approaching footsteps. Just outside the door they ceased. There was an agony of waiting.

Then the door to the bedroom opened, inch by inch. He could just descry a dark shape there. Then the shape moved, almost noiselessly, toward the bed. Ruth, game to the end, was simulating the natural rhythmic breathing of sleep.

The dark form drew nearer. Tyler moved the muzzle of the automatic until it was on a line with the figure's breast. Then, very quietly, he said:

"Stand where you are, Mrs. Gordon."

Nat pressed the switch, and the light flared on.

Carlotta, hair drawn back tightly from her pale brow, knotted at the back, stood barefoot, in pajamas, a long thin knife clutched in her hand. She whirled and saw her husband staring at her in sick despair.

She gave one choked little cry then. The blade gleamed as she turned it toward her breast. Nat, dropping his gun, sprang toward her. But the knife had been driven up to the hilt. She swayed into his arms, went limp.

On her own bed in the big house, Nelson and Harrigan laid the body of Carlotta Gaudio. At a sign from Johnson they stopped quietly from the room. The man who had spent the best years of his life in the service of Paul Gordon and his family looked down broodingly at the dead face. He bowed his head. In a moment he raised it. Gently he covered her with a sheet.

Downstairs, in the living-room, Paul Gordon sat slumped on the divan, his masklike face gray, his deep-sunk eyes betraying his suffering. On either side of him, biding his nerveless hands, were Helene and Doris. In a chair at one side, unable to bear the sight of those tragic eyes, was David, spent.

Nearby sat Ruth, her delicate face filled with sympathy. On the arm of her chair was Nat, his hand resting lightly on her arm but his eyes upon Doris. His back to the room, looking moodily out of the window, was Tyler. No word was spoken until the three men had returned from upstairs.

Tyler turned then, quietly motioned them to chairs. He looked at Gordon. "There are things to be done," he said gently. "Before I do them, I want you all to know the facts. We'll have the truth, at last. . . . And then it will die—here, with us."

The people in the room nodded. Gordon, by an effort, raised his head, met Tyler's eyes. For a moment Tyler looked at him. Then he drew in his breath. The thing must be got through with now. He spoke, quietly:

"I'll tell the story as matter-of-factly as I can. First, when and how I learned the identity of Gaudio's inside ally. He flashed a look at Ruth, who had leaned back in her chair, her head partly against Nat's arm, her great dark eyes turned toward her father.

"Ruth told me," said Tyler, "although she didn't know it herself. This is how she did it: You'll remember that she had unerringly foreseen every attempt made upon the members of this family. To my satisfaction, at least, she had proved she could detect the malignant purpose in that mind which was plotting death and destruction."

"Yet when Mrs. Gordon disappeared, ostensibly kidnapped by Gaudio, Ruth knew nothing whatever about it until I myself told her! And just a little later she knew that danger again threatened Helene—knew it at the very moment that Gaudio's men were forcing their way into the sanitarium."

Ruth paused, but no one spoke. Tyler nodded.

"Therefore," Tyler resumed, "I was convinced that Mrs. Gordon's disappearance was not part of Gaudio's vengeful plan. I was certain that she had disappeared of her own free will! As far as I was concerned, that branded her definitely as being in league with Gaudio. But I had no proof whatsoever, and not the shadow of a motive."

"Furthermore, I could not be sure that some one else was not aiding her, some one else who had access to the house and to its secrets. Then I learned that Doris had obtained from Collins the whereabouts of Helene, obtained this information only a short time before Helene was kidnapped."

"But Doris had previously tried to throw suspicion on Mrs. Gordon! And Mrs. Gordon, very subtly, while seeming to protect Doris, had planted a seed of suspicion against her in my mind—by a falsehood, by telling me that Helene, in her delirium, had been deathly afraid of Doris."

"Whether Doris was involved, or how, I didn't know. But I had to move. Calling helped me. I arranged his disappearance, hoping that the conspirators would really believe us all drawn off the trail. I shall add, now, that Doris, of course, was not involved, that she obtained Helene's whereabouts innocently, for Mrs. Gordon, so that they could help Helene, a surprise package of—yes, for Nelson's benefit. I shall also explain the seemingly strange behavior of Doris when she learned, through Ruth, that we had all gone to the Palma Gardens and that we were in danger."

He smiled at Nelson.

"Her first instinct was to rush to the Palma Gardens to try to warn us. You ran after her. She ran into the garage. Then she realized the futility of driving to the Palma Gardens, and instead telephoned, hoping to get one of us in time to warn us."

Doris nodded.

"That's that," said Tyler. "Now, as to Mrs. Gordon: I was sure that for some reason, undoubtedly connected with Gaudio, she had twice tried to kill her husband—then Helene—had shot Nat to avoid exile—and finally had betrayed Helene into Gaudio's hands."

"Here I made an error, which I based on the circumstances. I assumed that the attack on Helene and the subsequent betrayal of her to Gaudio were made because Mrs. Gordon was afraid that something Helene knew was incriminating to her."

"That's why I was so bitterly disappointed when it developed that Helene knew absolutely nothing incriminating about anybody! I realized, then, that it was hopeless to prove her guilt without setting a deliberate trap. But I knew, too, that even if we caught her red-handed, we should probably never know what had inspired her—and never know for sure whether or not Doris, or anyone else had aided her. That's what I had to find out. By the use of a bit of guile—I did so."

The Musings of A Native Son---

A Weekly Commentary on Things of Local Interest which will appear each Tuesday in this column.

I was looking through my scrap book, when I came across an article dated November 29, 1911, which gave an account of the 29th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the Friends' Meeting House, at the corner of Wood and Market streets. I began to count the years that have passed since the building of the Meeting House, and find that this year marks the 25th anniversary.

The program carried out twenty-five years ago, is as follows: Nineteenth Psalm, read by Mary H. Iredell; sketch of the establishing of the meeting prepared by Edwin Burton, read by Anna B. Cateen; poem, "A Quiet Meeting," Elizabeth Nelson read by Abbie N. Iredell; poem, "The Meeting," Whittier, read by Catherine R. Laing; poems written by Miss Emma C. Wildman and Samuel Swain, read by Anna W. Cateen; remarks were made by Louise Iredell and others.

As the time approaches for holding the National Conventions of the two great political parties, and we view with alarm the unsettled condition of the Nation, it would be well for the youth of America, to study the situation which existed prior to the election of Abraham Lincoln.

Great events were shaping themselves. A crisis was being reached that would try the souls of men. We of today cannot conceive the apprehension of those days, as men of that generation watched the gathering clouds.

May 16, 1860, Abraham Lincoln, was nominated for the presidency by the newly-formed Republican Party, in the famous convention held in the Chicago Wigwam. What a stormy gathering that was! Those who were present, never forgot that moment, big with destiny, when the Ohio delegation swung over to the Lincoln column, nominating him; and immediately pandemonium let loose. On Nov. 6th of the same year the elections were held and Lincoln won.

It was on April 23, 1860, that the National Democratic Convention met in Charleston, in sight of Fort Sumter, and split over the selection of a candidate for the presidency. A year did not go by before there would be heard the first shots of the Civil War. When December came South Carolina passed the ordinance of secession, and then the beginning of the end of peace was in sight.

Today upon the eve of the National Conventions we are face to face with a situation almost as apprehensive. Dissatisfaction and discontent exist everywhere. The present administration at Washington is inadequate and incompetent to handle the situation. Experimentation has failed, but in its wake has been left a burden of taxation that is becoming more and more unbearable. The old and safe policies of government have been cast aside, and a so-called "New Deal" has been built upon "class hatred," an attempt at the regimentation of business, the building of a bureaucracy at Washington, and the confiscation of State rights.

A system of relief has been inaugurated, that has proven itself to be the biggest piece of political rotteness, this country has ever seen. Although the Democratic Party has been in power for three years, and it has expended billions of dollars, in worthless experimentation, the question of unemployment has not yet been solved. An incompetent and incapable president, who has repudiated every pre-election promise, is trying to protect his own face, by blaming industry for not co-operating.

It would seem, that we of today, have every reason to look with apprehension upon the outcome of the coming National Conventions of the next few months, as did those of a former generation upon the conventions of 1860. Great events are shaping themselves. The next four or five years are fraught with the greatest danger. Many thoughtful persons are asking themselves the question: "Can our government hold itself together for four years more, under the incompetent, experimental and wasteful policies being followed by the present administration?" The crisis of 1860 was settled by a long and bloody civil war. With the present administration arraying the working man against his employer, creating sectional jealousies, using relief money to further its own political aggrandizement, and flirting with socialism and communism, in an effort to establish a dictatorship, the thoughtful American has much cause for apprehension.

THE ABOVE PICTOGRAPH should awaken farmers to the dangers which wasteful spending of public money is bringing on. In 1931 the value of all farms and farm buildings was nearly three times the public debt. That year, Democrats gained control of the House of Representatives. Since then Democrats have drawn up our revenue bills and our spending bills. Farm values have shrunk, but the public debt has doubled. It is estimated that next year the debt will exceed the value of all farms and farm buildings! Tobacco taxes, gasoline and other Federal taxes paid by the farmer are increasing. The farmer and his grandchildren will be taxed to pay off this debt. As shown in the pictograph, the debt threatens to overwhelm the farmer before he realizes his danger and demands a halt.

Birch Oil Industry Unique

By RON G. SERCOMBE

International Illustrated News Writer

READING, Pa.—Three Pennsylvania state policemen speeding along a picturesque highway in the historical Oley valley area of Berks county suddenly came to a screeching halt as they passed a cluster of small wooden shacks.

A sound like the rat-a-tat-tat of a battery of machine guns echoed from one of the ramshackle structures and the policemen nodded knowingly at each other.

They were looking for moonshiners—and the mountain areas of Berks county boast a number of them.

They stepped briskly into one of the buildings, hands at holsters, and a novel sight greeted their eyes.

In one corner, a gasoline engine was chugging away, turning a large knife-equipped wheel which was rasping through half-inch and one-inch birch tree branches. Chips of wood and bark clattered thunderously against the wooden walls and sheet-iron roof while in another corner a fireman was busy heaving coal into a tall, hissing steam boiler.

One of the men dropped the branches he was feeding into the large wheel and approached the policemen. His right hand was outstretched and he was smiling.

Oil Distilled From Bark

"Howdy, boys," he said. "My name's Warren Fox and this is my mill. Reckon you're looking for moonshiners. Well, the only kind of liquor you'll find in here is birch oil—and I don't think you'll like it much."

After looking around a bit, the policemen, not a little chagrined, left. "Yes... that happens pretty often," Fox remarked. "It was worse during prohibition than it is now, though."

And strange as it seems, these ramshackle mills which are busy eight months out of every year represent a $100,000 industry—the production of birch oil.

The oil is distilled from birch branches, which are cut in the Oley valley area, and sold to wholesale druggists to be made up into a rubbing ointment and liniment which are used for rheumatism, stiffness and other muscular ailments.

The oil contains secret properties which experts say are akin to those of oil of wintergreen, another ointment used for rubbing

NATURE CAN PROVIDE GOOD SPRING TONIC IN FRESH VEGETABLES

By RHANDENA A. ARMSTRONG
Home Economics Representative
Sulphur and molasses days are with us again. We moderns are fortunate today because we have other foods to take the place of this dreaded spring tonic supposed to pep up lagging appetites and help ward off spring fever.

It is a good time to take stock of the planned around plenty of fresh fruits, daily meals being served. During the winter months meat, potatoes, breads, cereals and desserts form the basis of the farm meals with just a mere sprinkling of vegetables and fruits. If so, now is a good time to surprise those lagging appetites with fresh vegetables and fruits. Two vegetables beside potatoes and two fruits every day are recommended for a well-balanced daily diet of vegetables and fruits.

You will never know what meals green vegetables and adequate milk will do until you try. The foods you have used abundantly this winter should take second place in favor of fresh foods.

A variety of foods are necessary for health and each food has a definite and worthwhile place in our meals. Just now our bodies need the extra minerals and vitamins supplied by milk, fruits and vegetables to help overcome this lack of pep usually so prevalent during the first warm days. Vegetables and fruits stimulate the flow of digestive juices and so are ideal foods for proper digestion and elimination.

Why not serve the family a fresh vegetable dinner with a fresh fruit dessert and a vegetable or fruit salad? A fresh vegetable soup, cottage cheese salad, rolls, milk and fresh fruit for dessert may answer the eternal question, "What shall we have for supper?"

RACCAGNO SCORES FLASHY THREE-ROUND VICTORY OVER OLIVER McCALL, COLORED; LAST CARD AT ST. ANN'S INDOOR ARENA

By T. M. Juno

Johnny "Dundee" Racagno, St. Ann's mittman, brought the indoor boxing season to a close last night in the Italian Mutual Aid arena when he scored a flashy three round victory over Oliver McCall, colored battler from the East Side Club.

Racagno had the fight from the start when he landed several wicked rights to the face of the colored youth, staggering him on several occasions. In the second, McCall went down on one knee but was up fast and tied up the Bristol youth. McCall rocked Racagno with a stinging left hook before the fight was over which hurt the Purple and Gold fighter but he came strong to make up for that blow.

The victory by Racagno gave the Bristol fighters an even break in the night's average. Eight St. Ann's mittmen stepped into the ring and four of them walked away with victories. Four of them were beaten, two by knockouts. St. Ann's used five novices in the bouts and two of them came across with victories. Seymour had three victories and two defeats for the night.

Nick Marchetti, the Brook street lad, came through with the most amazing victory of the night when he put away Wallace Geiger, East Side, in the second round. Geiger was in the semi-finals of a recent tournament. Marchetti has the ear-marks of a fighter and in the first round did nothing but dance around his opponent, occasionally landing a light blow. The colored boy stood with his right cocked waiting for the opportunity to plant it on the Bristol boy.

The second round seemed to wake up the St. Ann's warrior for he rushed from his corner, practically ran across the ring to meet his foe and stood on top of him, pounding him without taking a return. Geiger began to hold and after the break, Marchetti again got an opening and with a left, sent Geiger to the canvas for the full count.

The Newtown farmer, Al Horn, pulled the surprise of the night. Horn, for three-quarters of the first round, did not use his right hand and was taking a lacing from Ted Pancoast, East Side fighter. Horn had a jab which he used effectively but never followed up with his right. But with less than a minute remaining to be fought, Horn chopped over a short right which caught Pancoast on the chin and sent him down as the bell sounded.

From then on it was the St. Ann's fighter's fight. Pancoast took things easily, fearing that right which when it landed carried plenty of dynamite. Pancoast got over a pretty upper-cut in the last round which staggered Horn.

Joe Monachello, in his debut, did not fare so well, being counted out in the first round when caught with a right from the arm of Henry Collier, East Side. Laity Sciarra also was the victim of a knockout when his seconds tossed in the towel in the first round of his bout with Louis Rubenstine, Temple University boxer.

Sylvester Purnell, another novice from Lahaska, made an impressive debut against Walter Padlo, Seymour. Padlo's experience was too much for the Lahaska boy who suffered from a cut in the first round. Purnell possessed a hard right which found its mark on Padlo's stomach several times but did not cause any damage. Purnell was floored in the third session for the count of nine.

A tantalizing left hook by Tommy Lamont, East Side, proved to be the downfall of Al Paris, Holme A. A. Paris was coked by that left punch during the three round bout and twice kissed the canvas for counts. It was not until the final round that Paris showed an exhibition of his former self and landed several hard blows to the face of the East Side fighter but the lead of Lamont compiled in the first two rounds was too much to overcome.

The St. Ann's boxing team introduced James DePento, 112-pounder, to the fans and he made a very auspicious debut in his bout with Albert Givigliano, Seymour, despite the fact that he was beaten. DePento traded punches with his opponent for the entire three sessions and for a while appeared to be leading the affair but the Seymour fighter landed the harder and most effective blows and so carried the battle.

Carmen Volio, Seymour, refused to make a contest out of his fight with Tony Maglione, St. Ann's, who chalked up his fifth straight win. Maglione did most of the leading and fighting throughout the contest, even though he wasn't himself. Volio was contented to hold on and during the last round did not land a solid blow. Volio did his best fighting in the first when his right found its mark on Maglione's jaw three times. From then on Maglione's defense stood out while he did plenty of damage offensively. It was the final round in which Maglione increased his lead to so big an extent that there was no doubt as to whom the winner would be.

Two boys with an extra load of fighting stamina fought in the fourth fight of the night when Willie Leighton, Rescue Squad, the crowd pleaser, was given the decision over Felix LaPlaca, Seymour. LaPlaca furnished more "guts" than any fighter who has fought here for quite some time and Leighton was arm weary from swinging and in the final session pounded LaPlaca with everything except the ring-post, but still the Seymour boy was in there swinging and trying to uncock a hay-maker, realizing that it was his only hope for victory.

In the second round, Leighton put Felix down with a right under the heart but before the canto was over, LaPlaca had Leighton down on one knee but the Rescue Squad fighter was up before a count could be made. It is most likely that these two youngsters will be rematched on the opening card of the outdoor season.

Officials for last night were: Referee, Ray Belmont; judges, Nat Lipshultz and Ford Lilly; timer, Frank Palermo; inspector, Joe Brown; physician, Dr. Joseph Levy; and announcer, Patsey Moffo.

son went to second on a passed ball. Kysniak lifted a fly beyond second base which was basketed by Ad Roe. Kalenski caught a Wichser pitch and labeled into deep left for a double, scoring Tomlinson. Riley worked Wichser into a three and two position and then let the third strike go by. At the same time, Kalenski dashed for third and was nipped for the final out of the contest.

The Hibeos tallied a marker in the first when Joe Roe singled, advanced on an error by Fisher and scored on a fielder's choice. Their second run came in the fourth. Henry Clay doubled to center and counted on a single by McGinley. In the sixth, the third run came as the result of a double by Ashby and hits by Ad Roe and McGinley.

LANGHORNE TRIALS TO BE HELD SATURDAY

LANGHORNE, May 12.—Qualifying time trials for the Langhorne Speed-Inaugural auto race program scheduled for next Sunday afternoon, will begin at noon on Saturday, Joe Dawson, zone supervisor for the contest board of the American Automobile Association, has just advised drivers, entered in the event.

With more than 50 cars entered in the classic, officials say that it will be necessary to put more than half the field through speed trials Saturday in order to get the Sunday program underway promptly at 2:30 o'clock. All of the Indianapolis speedway drivers who expect to qualify for the Memorial day 500 mile race on Saturday and then fly to Langhorne that night in a chartered cabin cruiser, will be given the preference in the Sunday trials. The 26 fastest cars will be declared eligible to compete for the cash purses and the championship points as awarded by the AAA.

With the track considerably improved over previous years and recently treated with 12,000 gallons of heavy crude oil, prospects for lowering the course record of 36 seconds, held by Doc George Mackenzie, are particularly good, officials say. Chet Gardner, Long Beach, Cal., Mauri Rose, Indianapolis, Doc Mackenzie, Eddington, Tommy Hinnershitz, Reading, Floyd Davis, Springfield, Ill., Ken Fowler, Dayton, and Vern Orenduff, of Tallahassee, Fla., have all entered cars which are said to be capable of lowering the record.

In a trial run Saturday, George Kwasnak of Philadelphia, drove Bill Lehart's new Hal Special around the mile in 38 seconds, the fastest time ever made by that machine. The car was practically destroyed when it burst into flames during the trial, seriously injuring Kwasnak. The machine was to have been driven by Freddy Winnal next Sunday.

JUDGE EDDIE HOLLAND TO APPEAR AT CROYDON

CROYDON, May 12.—Judge Eddie Holland, former referee, matchmaker and promoter of the old Nonpareil A. C. in Philadelphia, is to appear at the Crofton Arena tomorrow night. Holland, a great sportsman, has formed the "Eddie" Holland A. C. in Philadelphia, where he has a great array of simon-pures in training and helping to make good citizens out of the young lads, in hopes some day they may make a name for themselves.

"Eddie," who was a former pug himself and a good one 30 years ago, will be at the ringside himself to instruct his boys of the knowledge he gained in his experience in the squared ring. He has had his boys in strict training for the past three months and this will be the first time any of them will have shown at any club.

The windup will be an encore between George Kinslow, Nativty C. C., against Chester Castor, representing Daggert A. C.

Tommy Balen, 160-pound lad from the Holland A. C. and a champion in the making who, "Eddie" says, will steal the show, will meet Larry Palma, Nativty C. C., aspirant to the title, in the semi-windup.

Billy Maher, Mason A. C., great little battler, who has a large following with the fans of this vicinity, will meet Al Pierce, Wharton Centre. Pierce is the lad who fought the Golden Glove champion to a standstill a few weeks ago.

Leonard Dever, Bristol, who is fast rising to the front, will meet Jimmy Lefferts of the Daggert Club. Dever, a great little fighter, will go a long way if he is handled right, and will be after his third win Wednesday night.

Frank Malone, Holland A. C., will go against Croydon's idol, Joe Meyers. Meyers, a greatly improved lad, is working seriously for this fight which he hopes to win by a knockout.

Tony DeAngelo, Daggert, will meet another lad from Croydon, Mike Scott. Scott can be remembered when he defeated George Shull of Burlington in a slugfest a short time ago.

Jimmy "Dumpy" Nocita, of Bristol, the most eccentric battler ever to be seen around here, is matched with George Bonenberg, Holland A. C. battler, in another bout, while Joe Check, Daggert A. C., will meet Johnny Martin, Holland A. C. Ace.

Jack Maguire, of the Holland Club, will stack against Leo Neary, Ken. A. C., and Tommy Francis, Germantown Boys Club, will open the show with Tommy Regan of the Kensington Club.

Al Rowe, a great lightweight of 15 years ago, who has fought the best in the class, including Wolgast, Dundee, Chaney, Kilbane, Welsh, Leonard, and many others, is coach and trainer of the Eddie Holland Club, and will personally second his fighters.

Matchmaker Mickey Gordon is making final arrangements for his outdoor arena, and will run his first show outside on June 3rd.

VAN DINE'S BAT PLAYS TOO MUCH FOR "ODDIES"

The bat of Owen VanDine played a prominent part in the Bath Road Men's Club victory over the Odd Fellows last night on the Bath Road diamond. VanDine drove in four runs and scored another himself as the Road Club registered a 7-3 win.

"Jake" Prall was on the hill for the Oddies and was nicked for eight hits. He was battered hard in the third when the Rittenmen found him for five hits and a pass to score six runs. The feature of this rally was a triple by VanDine with two pals on base.

In handling the Odd Fellows their third straight defeat, Mel Wright had the situation well in hand throughout the entire match. He limited the Radcliffe street boys to three hits and kept them well scattered. He struck out six.

Perfect Bucks County Dogwood Association

tree. Your hands and pocketbook must do that," said Mr. Muller, who explained that dogwood should be planted in October, November, December, January, February and March.

Mrs. Harry J. Shoemaker, well-known County Seat clubwoman and nature lover, urged the men and women to take this opportunity of making the county and State more beautiful. "Make you the world more beautiful because you live in it. Children should be taught to appreciate and understand the construction and beauty of the dogwood in season and out because it is beautiful the year round."

Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, Doylestown, speaking on his love of native trees, said he is extremely fond of the hemlock, dogwood and wild azalea. "I have been and am now interested in the cultivation of flowers, plants, and trees and believe we have in our own community the best for our own country."

Assistant County Superintendent Charles H. Boehm, Morrisville, assured the newly formed association that the teachers of Bucks county and heads of the school systems, including the county superintendent's office, will co-operate with the dogwood campaign.

Representing the Southampton Garden Club, a member broke the ice when she pledged herself, as well as her club, to plant a dogwood tree on the Southampton Library and School grounds.

Rev. George M. Whitenack, Jr., pastor of Doylestown Presbyterian Church, endorsed the movement not only of planting dogwoods but planting all native trees and stressed the value of teaching children the pleasure of recognizing various kinds of trees.
